11 Hot New Hotels We Can't Wait To Check Into

TRAVEL

By Erica O'Hara | 4th January 2023

New year, new holiday... That's how the old saying goes, right? With nearly every country open for travel again, 2023 is the year of holidays with (nearly) no restrictions. And with more travel, comes more brand new hotels. From idyllic tropical locations to luxury urban retreats, these are the hot new openings we're adding to the bucket list for 2023.

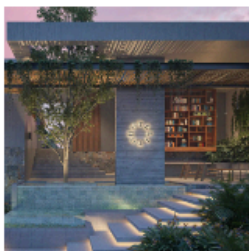

Looking for something a little closer to home? There are a host of hotels opening in the UK in 2023 too. For now, here's our pick of those abroad.

Hotelito by MUSA, Mexico

Set within jungles and mountains, steps away from a coastline of pristine white sand beach, Hotelito by MUSA offers dreamy barefoot luxury for nomads and creators. 11 bedrooms feature minimalistic design, with clean lines, organic textures, handcrafted materials, and locally-sourced accents that blend seamlessly to create a modern aesthetic inspired by the surrounding natural landscape. Elsewhere in the property, tropical hardwood and concrete and stone detailed architecture has been carefully selected with the community and environment in mind.

The new hotel's location alone is impressive enough, but to take it one step further, there's also salt water stargazing pools, a world-class farm to table restaurant and a beach club to enjoy.

Le Grand Mazarin, Paris

Sometimes we think they couldn't possibly squeeze any more chic hotels into Paris, but every time a new hotel opening proves us wrong. The one to watch this year is Le Grand Mazarin, the first urban hotel from the Maisons Pariente group, who've given us hotels like the beautiful Le Coucou in Meribel.

Located right by the Seine, and designed by architect Martin Brudnizki (of Annabel's in London and The Beckman in New York fame), we already know we're going to be in for the most dreamy of Parisian getaways.
